April

Child Abuse Prevention Month

The U.S. Senate and House of Representatives proclaimed April 1983 as the first National Child Abuse Prevention Month. Since then, child abuse and neglect awareness activities have been promoted across the country during April of each year. The Office on Child Abuse and Neglect (OCAN) within the Children's Bureau coordinates Child Abuse Prevention Month, providing information and releasing updated national statistics about child abuse and neglect each April. In 2003, as part of the 20th anniversary of the original Presidential Proclamation designating April as Child Abuse Prevention Month, OCAN recast the National Child Abuse Prevention Initiative as a year-long effort. In 2004, OCAN built on a national momentum to shift the focus of child abuse prevention towards a family strengthening message promoting parenting and community support. Today, the Child Abuse Prevention Initiative is an opportunity for communities across the country to keep children safe, provide the support families need to stay together, and raise children and youth to be happy, secure, and stable adults. In the past few years, the focus has shifted toward a more positive message of celebrating individuals, organizations, and communities who have done much to prevent child abuse and neglect. Union-Snyder Community Action Agency (CAA) dedicates this issue of the BULLETIN to all those who work to strengthen and support families. From parents to foster parents to adoptive parents to community groups to county, state, and private organizations-the list is endless of those committed to raising healthy, strong families! We celebrate you and your efforts to build families and communities. In recognition of Child Abuse Prevention Month, the focus of this issue of the BULLETIN is on strengthening families. Thanks to the organizations that have contributed articles to this special edition of the BULLETIN.

This issue of the Bulletin is funded in part by a Community Services Block Grant from the PA DCED and Human Services Development Fund Grant from the PA Department of Public Welfare.

- In 2005, 101,608 children younger than 18 were arrested in Pennsylvania, a 2.4% decrease from 104,140 arrests in 2004. Of the arrests in 2005, 5,107 were for violent crimes and 1,689 were for possession of a weapon.

Emotional Abuse

“Stupid! You never do anything right!” Words can be painful.

Constant name calling, put down, humiliation in front of others....These are words that make a child feel worthless. Ugly. Not loved.

Parents may not know how damaging their words can be.
They may think harsh words will help their children behave,
but the pain of a parent's mean words can last forever.
A parent can hurt their children without lifting a hand.

Can you remember a time when someone you loved hurt you with words?
The sound of those words might last for years.

Remember

- √ Say “I love you” often. Give kids hugs. Smile!!!
- √ Praise your kids. “Good Job!”
- √ Tell them why you are proud of them.
- √ Give your child easy jobs she can do for herself. Let her be a winner.
- √ Help make him proud of himself.
- √ Don't tease your child. It's not a game to confuse or frighten a child.
- √ Don't make fun of the way he/she looks.
- √ Stick up for your kids. Don't let others tease or make fun of them.
- √ Let your kids know HOW IMPORTANT THEY ARE TO YOU!!! Say you are terrific! I love you! I like you!
- √ Report any teacher or coach who uses humiliation to try to teach children a lesson.

If you are concerned you may be emotionally or verbally abusing your child....try the following quick and easy activity:

Tape a piece of paper unto your refrigerator. Keep a pencil nearby or use a string to tape a pencil near the piece of paper. Several times a day or the week...write down what you say to your child. Take the paper and read it to yourself out loud while looking in a mirror. How did you feel? Did you say kind and supportive statements? OR Were they negative or cruel? How would your friends feel if you said the same things to them?

Being a parent is a HARD job... and the only job that doesn't require an education or a license! Dirty diapers. Noise. Crying. Not enough money. Decisions. Responsibility. Sometimes it seems like too much to handle. Sometimes you just want to run away. But child abuse doesn't have to happen. Child abuse can be prevented; by parents willing to learn why abuse happens, by parents who care. . . .parents like you!

WHAT TO DO WHEN YOU SEE A PARENT MISTREAT A CHILD IN PUBLIC

Adapted from the PA Family Support Alliance Newsletter

Have you ever been at the grocery store and seen a parent treat their child in a way that made you feel uncomfortable? Maybe you have seen a mom or dad slap their child across the face, leave their child locked in a car or speak to their child in a very nasty way. You may even see something that makes you fear for the child's safety.

One of the main reasons for poor parenting is that the parent expects the child to be able to do something that they just are not able to do. A parent may expect a two year old to share with his brother when a two year old's brain does not understand this yet. Other reasons for poor parenting are high levels of stress in the parents' lives and not using discipline methods that work.

You can play an active role in keeping these nasty parenting situations from turning into child abuse. If an adult is losing patience with a child, step in, but keep it positive. Don't try to correct the parent or make them feel bad for what they did- this will just make matters worse. You can help to calm things down for the child and then the parent may see that what they did was not the best way to handle the child.

Start talking with the parent to take the attention away from the child. Here are some ideas:

- "He seems to be testing you"
- "My child sometimes gets upset like that too."
- "Kids can really wear you out sometimes. Is there something I can do to help?"
- "Kids at that age have so much energy- sometimes it's hard to keep up."
- "It looks like your child is having a bad day."

Try to get the child's attention by talking to him:

- "I like your sneakers. Is that Bob the Builder on your shirt?"
- "Is that animal crackers you are eating? I bet they are good."

Look for a chance to praise the parent or the child

- "She has the most beautiful eyes, she looks just like you."
- "How old is your son? He looks like a good helper. I have a little boy that age."

If the child is in danger, offer help. If they are left alone in the grocery cart, stand nearby till the parent comes back. If you think there is a good chance the child will be hurt, contact the store manager for help. If a child is left alone in a car, wait close by for a short time, then call police.

4-H ~Community Connections

Where can kids have fun, participate in exciting hands-on activities and make new friends while working with adult volunteers from the community? Any 4-H'er can tell you!

4-H has something for everyone. Boys and girls ages five to eighteen join 4-H to learn about science, engineering, technology, community service, nutrition, exercise from knowledgeable community leaders.

In 4-H clubs, camps, in-school and afterschool programs, kids learn leadership, citizenship and life skills while they participate in experiences that prepare them to be successful adults. Today 4-H touches the lives of more than three hundred kids across Snyder County.

To learn about how to join or volunteer in our community, call Penn State Cooperative Extension in Snyder County at 570-837-4252 or email wellerky@psu.edu. Penn State is committed to affirmative action, equal opportunity, and the diversity of its workforce.

Special Kids Network

The Special Kids Network (SKN) is a statewide toll-free helpline. The SKN helpline provides callers with a broad range of referral services for children with special health care needs and their families. The SKN helpline has two components: Information & Referral, and System of care. For more information on SKN go to www.dsf.health.state.pa.us.
